Beach Closed (Not)

We Can Thank The King Of England For Our Freedom To Stroll The Beaches

By Dan Rattiner

We are so lucky to have laws protecting our beaches. Created in colonial times, they were put together by Englishmen who felt that what was fair for one was fair for all. Every citizen would have the right of access to the beaches. Every citizen would have the right to walk the length of the beaches. Nobody could put up a barrier blocking that right.

Last summer, a wealthy man named Simpson bought an oceanfront house in Water Mill and, as his lawyer later said, "in order to keep out those less desirable," put a barrier up at the entrance to a sand road that crossed a corner of his property so that fishermen and clambers with 4x4 vehicles could not get through. A furious Southampton Town Supervisor, upon hearing of this problem, immediately sent out the highway department with equipment to tear out the concrete and steel apparatus Mr. Simpson had installed on his property. They drove right onto his property.

Right onto the sand road that the public has the right to use forever. Simpson, a New Jersey native, made no objection. He had been given a quick course in New York law by his attorneys, apparently. The rights of access, according to the 1686 Dongan or out of office every other November to this day.

All this came to mind recently when I read an article about beach access in Malibu, California. Here on the East Coast, we go back to the fair-minded Englishmen for these laws. Out in Malibu, they are following directions set down by legislators in Sacramento in the early 1980s, who are a lot more sophisticated, cunning and malevolent. In short, they screwed it up.

This is the way it works in California, under the California Coastal Commission Act. When a homeowner buys beachfront property, he must dedicate an easement from the street to the water. Well, at the last minute, a few people with deep pockets added a few amendments to the bill while it was being put together. One didn't dedicate an easement. One OFFERED to dedicate an easement. And then the local village or town or city would step in and accept this offer, and in doing so agree to maintain it and keep it looking tidy and clean. The municipality consisted of the general public, after all. And so it made sense that the general public of that community, if they wanted to take on the easement, should take care of it. Of course, if a long time passed and the offer was not picked up by anybody, well, then I guess the easement was not necessary. Fifteen years ought to be enough time. Then the property owner was free to close it off.

The California legislature fell for this baloney. They passed the bill, the governor signed it into law and, in 1986, environmental groups, law in hand, came away saying, well, I guess half a loaf is better than none. As it has turned out, of course, it is no loaf at all in wealthy communities such as Malibu.

Statewide in California, about 1,300 easements have been picked up by various towns and villages along the coastline. In Malibu, the city fathers there are not interested. The millionaire offers up an easement and the city says thanks for the offer, but we're not interested. In one case, two neighbors, Frank Mancuso (retired MGM chairman) and Donald Wildman, discovering that a prior owner had an easement with the city, made an arrangement to close the easement by agreeing to provide bus transportation for local youths to another beach rather than allow them to use the old easement. Malibu said "Yes." In another arrangement, three neighbors blocked off their beachfront properties with a high fence so that not only could no one go there, but no one could even SEE what was there. They got Malibu to go along with that in exchange for giving them a piece of beach elsewhere in town. This is being challenged in court.

As you can see, this is a good argument for not allowing recent arrivals with deep pockets to run for office and take over the government of a small town.

Anyway, the issue was in the news because now it is fifteen years from when the law was passed and guess what — the offers for easements, unaccepted, are being withdrawn and that is that.

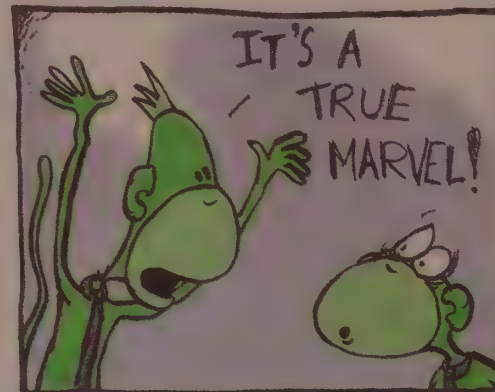

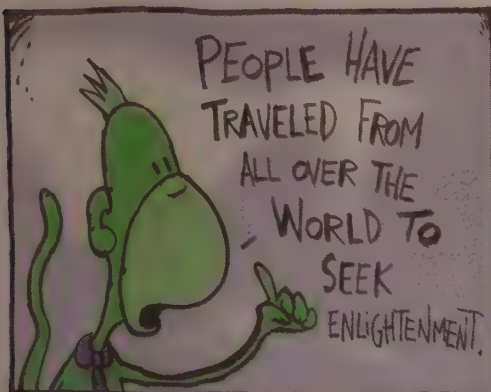

Nobody is arguing that people should be allowed to tramp across someone's property without permission in the Hamptons. But this newspaper's position is that, when you buy beachfront property — and there are easement roads to the beach, marked "Trustee Roads" clearly on every deed — there is no wiggling around it. You get what you bought.

We are not a private enclave. There are people from all walks of life living here. And so far, we have done a pretty good job of protecting the rights of all, as explained to us by the King of England, notwithstanding the fact that, at a later date, we deposed him.

The worst thing that could happen out here, in my opinion, is that all our beachfront is walled off and becomes a place for the use of but a private few. We are too diverse and too beautiful for that. The South Fork, and the Hamptons in particular, was designated back in the early '90s by the Nature Conservancy as one of the "Last Great Places" in the world. For the good of all, we should keep it that way. When Katharine Lee Bates wrote about amber waves of grain and purple mountain majesties, we were what she was referring to when she wrote, "from sea to shining sea."

The Blue Nose Ferry To Get You To Nova Scotia Starts Up Again In May

By Dan Rattiner

And now, the latest news from around the world. While the case of the midnight murder of millionaire Ted Ammon — committed in East Hampton last October — remains unsolved, Generosa Ammon, Ted's bereaved widow, has just gotten married. Her new husband is Daniel Pelosi, the Manorville electrician she met a year ago when he was installing a burglar alarm system in the Ammons' East Hampton house. She and Pelosi have been living together this past year in the Ammon penthouse in Manhattan while she has battled her husband — then alive — trying to get a divorce. Now, of course, that divorce is unnecessary.

The Ammon-Pelosi marriage took place in secret in Queens, New York, one day after Pelosi, the Manorville electrician, obtained a legal divorce from his wife Pamela. The twin eleven-year-old children the Ammons adopted from the Ukraine were in attendance.

The twins then accompanied Ammon and Pelosi to England, a destination they left for immediately after the wedding, and are installed in school near Coverwood House, the ten-bedroom estate built one hundred years ago on the top of a twelve-acre hill that Ted Ammon bought for his wife and where the new family will now reside.

Residents of the nearby town of Peaslake wonder if Generosa and Daniel will allow a continuation of the Coverwood Concert at the Lakes, a three-day black tie event that takes place on the Ammon

January 24, Judge Roger Walker issued a bench warrant for the arrest of Daniel Pelosi after Mr. Pelosi failed to show up in court to answer a drunk driving charge. It turned out, however, that Pelosi had gotten permission from his parole officer to leave the country. Pelosi is on parole from a previous drunk driving conviction. And so Judge Walker lifted the bench warrant and postponed the case over to February 21.

Pelosi is 38, Generosa Ammon is 46 and Ted Ammon who got bopped was 58. The twins are 11.

Meanwhile, there have been new developments in the Lizzie Grubman case today. According to the New York Daily News, reliable sources report that a local girl attending the ladies' room at Conscience Point Inn in Southampton is prepared to testify that Grubman cursed at her and issued racial epithets before leaving the premises, going out to the parking lot, getting into her daddy's Mercedes, allegedly telling the valet there he was "f_g white trash" and then backing up into the side of the building, injuring fourteen people. The Grubman trial is expected to begin in late May or early June.

Our final news item involves the passing of Edie Bouvier Beale, who died in Miami at 85 on Thursday. "Little Edie" Beale, along with her

"The Ammons never made many friends around here," one local resident told the New York Post. Meanwhile, in East Hampton on Thursday, mother, "Big Edie" Beale, was the subject of an Academy Award winning documentary Grey Gardens, made in 1976, about the dependant relationship of these two women on one another and the rundown condition of their mansion Grey Gardens in the estate section of East Hampton. They were living there in semi-poverty and in unsanitary conditions with more than 20 cats indoors. The Beales were the cousin and aunt, respectively, of Jackie Bouvier Kennedy Onassis, who grew up here. The documentary was made by Albert and David Maysles, and reportedly, with the death of Edie, may be re-broadcast on CBS during June of 2002.

Grubman Trial, the unfolding evidence in the murder of Ted Ammon and the release of the two-day ABC mini-series on the Hamptons by award-winning filmmaker Barbara Kopple, could involve new revelations involving Sean "Puffy" Combs, Ira Rennert's 100,000 square foot home, now under construction in Sagaponack and soon to be the largest private home in America and some other new matters, we are pleased to announce that the sponsor of this special newscast, the Blue Nose Ferry, has released its 2002 schedule.

The Blue Nose ferry will begin its summer season of operation on May 23, the first boat leaving for Nova Scotia at 8 a.m. and the second boat at 4 p.m. Departure point is the ferry dock in Bar Harbour, Maine. Nova Scotia is very peaceful during the summertime, a great place to live far away from all the crowds, and the boats arrive in Yarmouth, a charming Canadian fishing town, at 10:45 a.m. and 6:45 p.m. respectively. Fare is $45 per passenger one way and if you take your car, the fare for the car is $85. For more information, call 888-249-7245. The call is toll-free.

The Pleasures Of Watching Other People Injure Each Other To No Permanent Effect

By Dan Rattiner

I saw the press conference where Mike Tyson and Lennox Lewis announced they will be fighting in April. Tyson glared at Lewis, got up and strode angrily over to where Lewis was sitting, punched a security guard who tried to get between them, and then received a blow to the head from Lewis which caused a small cut. A melee followed where people from both sides wrestled with each other and threw chairs. Jose Sulaiman, the president of the World Boxing Council was knocked unconscious, someone called for an ambulance to assist Lewis who had been bitten on the leg by Tyson, and then, as things were settling down, Tyson walked to face the many photographers and writers who were in the media area, gave them the finger, grabbed his crotch menacingly and issued curses at them.

It's been a bad few weeks for Tyson. First, another woman claims he raped her. This would be the fourth claim if my counting is correct. (His record: 1 win (claim thrown out), 1 loss (one conviction), 1 draw (one settled), 1 no contest (no conviction). His wife filed divorce papers a week ago. He fired his trainer four days ago.

A friend, also a prizefighter, who claims Tyson hit him in the back of the neck and tore his mink coat to shreds last week, was in the audience heckling him at the press conference. On Tuesday, Tyson had to go to the Nevada

Six months ago, Tyson said he wanted to eat Lewis's children. At least he didn't bite him higher.

I thought they would give Tyson his license back. If the Tyson-Lewis fight had gone ahead, Tyson would have gotten $20 million and Lewis $20 million. These are gladiators, who hit each other in the head until one of them can't stand up anymore, bleeds too much, gives up or when we run out of time and go to the scorecards. Give the people what they want.

State Athletic Commission to get them to give him his boxing license back, which they took away when he bit that piece of Holyfield's ear off. (They didn't.)

"You guys are afraid of a REAL man," Tyson yelled at a photographer at the press conference. The Lewis bite turned out to be right through the clothes and below the knee.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 185

Stupor Bowl Sunday

Well, it's coming. Late this year... Stupor Bowl Sunday is in February. I've tried to understand football, I've tried very hard. Twenty-two millionaires face each other in colorful outfits to fight over a ball. Each man can only do certain things on the field. Every professional football player, no matter what drugs he gets caught doing, is a superstar and a role model for our youth. Despite the fact that football players serve no useful purpose in society, other than entertainment, they are deified.

More than that, they need a new stadium in New York to accommodate their deification and we get to pay for it, oh joy. I say, if the owners can pay megabucks for these two digit IQ moving monoliths, they can pay for their own new stadium. They don't need help from the taxpayers to get richer. I'd rather see New York spend money on a St. Judes Hospital here, or something else worthwhile, like maybe an Estee Lauder Home for the Aged, for when I can no longer manage to feed, dress myself or apply my cosmetics.

I remember back when I was married, the Stupor Bowl parties. Making all the dips, chopping veggies to go to waste, buying cases of crunchy stuff and beer at BJ's. Of course, I had to buy special football shaped napkins and coasters, but I only had to buy them once, since they never seemed to get used. I would bring them out every year; they became like annual Christmas decorations.

Men love Stupor Bowl parties, they can come in costume, including face and body painting. Whooping, grunting and creative swearing are mandatory. Every man must pretend to know more than he actually knows about football. Excessive ingestion of all available foods and drink is just part of the fun.

My ex-husband always had me make my chili. I love to cook and I never met a man who didn't love my chili. All men love chili. Chili goes with Stupor Bowl Sunday like turkey goes with Thanksgiving. Why? Because men enjoy high octane flatulence and the effect it has on everyone around them. Nothing beats chili and beer for the highest quality flatulence. I had many boyfriends before I was married, I have five brothers, and I have hosted many Stupor Bowl parties and my research has verified that the average group of Stupor Bowl partiers can drive away every woman and child within a hundred yard radius one hour after group chili consumption commences.

It's a terrible thing for women and children to be driven from the warmth and safety of their homes because of gas expulsion. Thank goodness, we can always find shelter at the malls. Malls have food courts for hungry children. Stores for the wonderful women who have surrendered their clean and tidy homes for football mayhem. It's a huge sacrifice to be forced to spend hours shopping, then go the movies while the post game arguments and fights happen at home.

Ultimately we return home. I have a clear memory of walking into my house after one Stupor Bowl party, I think it was my house. I was hoping it wasn't, but the presence of a familiar man passed out on the couch with his foot on the coffee table and in the dip gave it away. Dirty dishes everywhere, including the floor. A colorful assortment of different color chips and crackers had been ground into confetti and liberally showered around the carpet by the joyful crowd. The beer bottles and cans were balanced on every available surface. There was a Heineken corner, a designated Dos Equis section and of course the low rent Budweiser district by the laz-e-boy. Obviously they were trying to create a lively party scene for Leroy Neiman to paint. I was very impressed.

The problem with having a man in your life is that he is in your house. I read somewhere years ago, that Cloris Leachman and her husband lived side by side in separate houses. At the time I was young, unmarried, and I thought that was atrocious. Now, I think that's the best idea I ever heard. Just build the bedrooms back to back with a connecting door... and lock the door on chili nights.

Café Woof

Bonjour Monsieur Bichon, Voulez-Vous Du Café Le Matin

By Dan Rattiner

About three weeks ago I noticed this really odd thing about my dog Spalding. I was sitting at the kitchen table drinking coffee when Spalding leaped on my lap, as he sometimes does, and began to nuzzle me and seek affection. I rubbed his head and stroked his ears a few times, but instead of continuing on with this, which Spalding usually does, he turned and went after my coffee.

We fought about it for awhile. Spalding weighs about fifteen pounds and he wasn't going to drink my coffee if I had anything to do with it. Since I outweigh him so much and he knows this, I realized, as we struggled, that he must have really wanted that coffee a lot to put up such a fight.

In the end, of course, he lost, and got dumped off my lap and yelled at. I also shook my finger at him and, after dusting myself off, drank the coffee down in one swig. See? No more coffee. And you didn't get any.

All along, I've known that Spalding has unusual eating habits. He does not like chocolate, for example. He'll eat an oatmeal cookie. He'll eat an oatmeal cookie with raisins. He will not eat a chocolate chip cookie even if it looks like an oatmeal cookie with raisins. He has, I think, a hell of a nose, as they say in the wine business. No chocolate. No dogfood, please. Yes pizza. Yes General Chou's Chicken. And for coffee, he will fight.

I have attributed this strange behavior to the history of the breed. He's a little French curly-of France holding this breed, which is called a Bichon Frise. Everybody's happy. And there is not a chocolate chip cookie anywhere.

As for coffee, well, as soon as I recognized this craving in him I did what each and every one of you would do, which is, whenever I get coffee to go — you can't do this at the dinner table — I get a large container of it, a second empty container and then, in my car, I split the coffee up in equal amounts, one half for him, the other half for me. He drinks his half noisily, getting it all down at once, then belches happily and curls up. I sip mine slowly through the little opening in the plastic lid.

But I might stop the car and have to run into the hardware store. I learned something the first time I did this. When I came out, my half a cup, which I had left with the lid on, was on the floor, empty, the lid off. Lots of parts of the car were damp, as in formerly wet but licked clean. You get the idea. Belch.

This will explain, and people have looked at me funny when they have seen me do this, all those times I get out of my car, put the coffee

Butchers

89 Healthy Trees On The Highway Cut By Disgruntled Subcontractor Workers

By Dan Rattiner

I had dinner with a friend the other night and the conversation turned to how the landscapers from the lighting company, given the job of keeping the tree branches away from the power lines, have turned into butchers. It's disgraceful. And it didn't used to be this way. They used to do a very good and caring job.

My friend is someone who is very familiar with the dealings of the lighting companies. He has two large estates, one here and the other in upstate New York. He once won a lawsuit against an upstate lighting company when they came on his property and butchered some trees.

"It was actually because of just one tree," he told me. "A beautiful spruce tree with a trunk about fourteen feet around. They had one single wire going through the branches of this tree. They came on my property unannounced and hacked out one third of the spruce. Ruined it. I went to court."

My friend's lawyer held a deposition, inviting the tree trimmers to give testimony, at which time they expressed complete ignorance of any rules about how they were supposed to trim.

"Turns out the State of New York has a rulebook for lighting companies. They can access your property. But they must get written permission. And they can only cut down a tree if it is diseased.

Other than that, they can prune your tree, but they must do it tastefully and artfully. They cut a branch one way because they know it grows out the other way. They are trained in landscaping. Or are supposed to be."

The lighting company settled with my friend for $15,000. They had wanted to avoid a public trial where it would have come to light that the tree trimmers lacked proper training.

"Here on the East End," my friend said, "because the butchering job we experienced throughout the East End last week."

Those of us who have been here a long time will recall ten years ago when a hurricane, Hurricane Bob, came through and knocked many trees into power lines, cutting off electricity to much of the East End. It was a crisis, and our lighting company was unable to get the situation straightened out for the better part of a week.

"Turned out the lighting company had woefully underestimated its maintenance crew needs," my friend said. "It was a scandal. But when it was over, the president of the lighting company, Dr. William Catacosinos, who had been away in the Caribbean on vacation through this disaster and who had ignored all pleas to cut his vacation short, promised that henceforth this would never happen again. And he kept that promise. He ordered new funding for more trucks, more training, more crewmen, more landscapers. We did fine after that.

"And those workmen knew what they were doing and knew the rules. They were respectful and polite on the job, on my property, anyway. They were full time lighting company workers and proud of it. They had training, medical benefits, the whole nine yards. They did what they had to do, but you never of the size of my property, the lighting company people have to come across it to do their trimming. And there has been an unbelievable change in who these people are and how they behave in the last ten years. The cause of it? Money. That's what caused

My friend told me that since he has such a large piece of property out here, he actually got to know some of these workmen. They'd call and ask to come on his property and prune every year.

"A few years ago, however, maybe it was with the LIPA takeover," my friend said, "everything changed. These maintenance workers, almost all of them, were gone, transferred, laid off, fired. I think management thought it was too expensive having them full time on the books. Instead, the lighting company farmed out the work. Now I get these crews from New Jersey, guys who are working for a subcontractor, and they've been given just one instruction. Do whatever you have to do to get on the property and cut the damn trees down. They are the worst. I find them, without permission, driving their trucks on my land. I call their supervisors. I get into arguments. These guys know no rulebooks. They have almost no training. The contractors pick them up off the street. And it's all economics. If you butcher the trees, you don't have to come back every year, you have to come back every five years. With the fee charged by the subcontractor the same, the less work they do the more they make.

"Oddly, the guys who used to work on the old lighting company crews are livid about this. I talk to them. We're old friends. These old crewmen all live here, surrounded by this butchery. The subcontractor workers couldn't care less. They go back to Jersey.

"And — this is really strange — the management at the lighting company sides with the subcontractors. They may pay the same now for the subs, but down the road, if the subs only have to come back every five years, then the cost of having them — the subs have to bid to get the jobs — has to go down as the years go by."

All of the above may explain something that has been an odd mystery. The worst of the butchery is in Mecox, on Montauk Highway, right by the lighting company headquarters, where the subcontractor crews have simply sawn down to stumps 89 beautiful old trees that had absolutely nothing wrong with them. Knowing the bad feeling between the subcontractor workers and the employee workers, many of whom are still at the company, lends some sense to this barbarity. Call it in-your-face illegal tree destruction.

Whether my friend's theory explains all this correctly or not, the issue underlying this problem, which is not going to go away anytime soon, is that all the wires on all the poles cluttering up the landscape should be put underground, and the poles removed.

I spoke at length to Rep. George Guldi from our district, telling him this amazing tale my friend told me, and asking him why something can't be done about getting the wires underground. The cost of these maintenance crews must be astronomical. The cost of people being killed driving into poles is astronomical. The cost of downed sparking high voltage wires in the streets is astronomical. You cannot put a price on how poles and wires have ruined the natural beauty of our countryside. And the wires are only going to get thicker, heavier and more dangerous as more and more companies string things up on the poles.

Guldi agreed with me. "I was an electrician before I was elected to the county legislature," Guldi told me. "To put electric lines underground today is nowhere near as expensive as it was twenty years ago. The cable used today costs just one third the price. And it is waterproof. Years ago, we had no waterproof cable, and you'd have to pack the cable in insulation and then fill it with liquid nitrogen. It was a big operation."

Guldi told me that three years ago he looked into the idea of putting all the wires in the county underground, but he couldn't get anywhere with it. Perhaps now is the time to re-visit this idea.

I told him the whole county was behind this idea, which I think it is. I reminded him that now there are so many companies doing business who need wires up and down the street who pay for that service. And he reminded me that the water company pipes are all underground. Those who argue that doing this is a very expensive proposition should be told that it has been done before.

Fifteen years ago, Suffolk County became the first county in America to ban sulfates in laundry soap. Because of our efforts — you couldn't get Tide or any of the other prominent brands here for two years — all the big manufacturers of laundry soap modified their formulas. One year ago, Suffolk County became the first county in America to pass laws making it illegal to drive while holding a cell phone up to your ear.

"Cell phones are regulated by the federal government," I told Guldi, "and so is laundry detergent. Motor vehicles are regulated by New York State. Yet the county passed laws."

"We passed laws because we claimed the state and federal agencies were being negligent," Guldi said.

"They are neglecting this problem as well," I told him. • on the hood, and then disappear into a hardware store.

Know why there are car accidents? How about this. I am driving along, the dog comes over to my coffee cup out of which I have just started drinking — so the little plastic flap on top is pinned back — and he ever so gently picks the thing up with his teeth, right where the plastic flap has been pinned back, and disappears into the back seat.

Needless to say, keeping the dog and my half of the coffee apart has become a well thought out and foolproof routine on my part. I like my morning coffee. And besides, I have a superior brain and an opposable thumb.

And yet, the other morning, I noticed something else. Normally I get my coffee at Hampton Bagel in East Hampton, or at the Hess Station in Waincott. But this particular morning, I got my coffee at the Barefoot Contessa in East Hampton, where they sell perhaps the most expensive cup of coffee in the Hamptons at the moment. I got my usual large with a second empty cup, went out to the car and poured him his half. He sniffed it and would have none of it.

"What the hell is wrong with this?" I asked. "It cost a dollar fifty for this cup of coffee. Drink it."

But he wouldn't drink it. This was a very excellent cup of coffee, I might note, fully worth the dollar fifty. It is the way I like it. Decaf. No Sugar. Milk. Nice and smooth. No sharp edges.

I drank mine. Then I drank his.

The next morning, while getting my coffee to go — in one of my usual haunts, the Sagg General Store — I briefly considered getting TWO cups of coffee, one the way I like it, the other with LESS milk, milk can't be good for a dog, and maybe with a teaspoon full of....well, I thought, why don't I ask him?

I thought about that and of course that was a very stupid thought. So I once again got the coffee the way I usually like it, which, this time, he again drank.

One of these days, I will come back from a deli with a cup of coffee in one hand and an empty cup in the other and I will be walking toward my car and there he will be in the passenger seat in the front, looking out at me, a lit cigarette dangling from one corner of his mouth.

Maybe I ought to buy him a beret and sunglasses. Bonjour monsieur. Avez vous mon cafe? Mais oui. Bon. Let them eat cake. But no chocolate chips, please.

that spin them around until they throw up.

A clock ticks down the time they spend in there.

"Want to go on?"

"Aaaaaagh. Aaaaaaagh."

"I can't hear you. Our monitors tell us you are in the danger zone. Want to go on? The next question is for four thousand dollars."

"YESSSSSS."

(Cheers).

"What is the capitol of Minnesota and who was the governor in 1924?"

"I KNOW that!"

I'm told there is another weekly show on one of the networks called Xtreme where they stick your head in a paper bag filled with ants. And tennis great John McEnroe is hosting a game show called The Chair. I don't know what that is about but I bet The Chair is not one of the prizes you win.

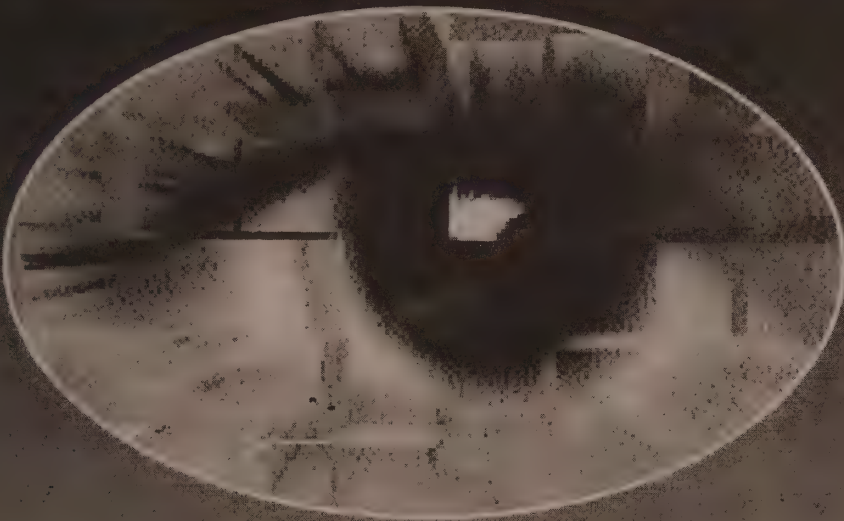

And then I saw my son, the one with the mild disposition and sweet manner, playing the new video game for the GameCube. It is their best seller. You are an armed car thief. The idea is to see how many policemen and innocent bystanders you can kill and how many cars you can go careening off in before they get you.

I'm thinking back. We all know about the Romans and the Lions and the Christians. I once visited the ruin of an eighth century Mayan playing field in Mexico where you either played well or they cut off your head and presented it to the ruler in the stands.

In my house when I was growing up, we had cap pistols, plastic swords, toy soldiers, Red Ryder bb guns. We played good guys and bad guys and when you got shot, you laid down dead.

Aggressiveness exists, particularly in those with high testosterone levels. The idea, I guess, is to channel it safely. Holyfield seems to be okay with a bit of ear missing. The cops seem okay. If the public wants to spend $40 million to watch Lewis and Tyson hit each other with padded gloves for awhile, I say let 'em. Just everybody be ready to jump in and stop it if it looks like somebody is getting hurt. That's the idea anyway. We aren't barbarians, you know.

GOLDEN GLOBES ON THE VIEW

I appeared on ABC's The View to show viewers how they could get the looks of their favorite stars at the Golden Globes at a fraction of the price the stars would have to pay if they paid for the outfits. Designers vie to get the famous to wear their dresses, especially to a major event. Copying a $30,000 dress for a tiny fraction is difficult, finding a model with the same looks makes it a little more difficult and doing this in 48 hours makes it exceedingly difficult! However, my staff and I shopped, sewed and pulled it together for a fun segment hosted by Meredith Vieira and Lisa Ling.

1. Halle Berry is hot as a pistol in a mocha Valentino that fits like a second skin. Lizzie's dress was made in 48 hours from scratch by American designer, Victor Costa. This is the most difficult look to copy due to the intricate lace and beading.

2. Jennifer Aniston had the best accessory, Brad Pitt! Jennifer looked amazing in her Dolce & Gabbana ($2,000-$3,000). Viki is wearing a silk dupioni suit from Liz Claiborne ($298). The fit is key; look for a shorter jacket that ends around the hip and is nipped in the waist. The little diamond necklace completes the look.

3. Jennifer Connelly, A Beautiful Mind, was all glam in a Narcisco Rodriguez with a camellia in the cleavage. We found the knockoff at dresses.com.

4. Jennifer Garner, Best Actress, Alias; looked great in a $1,700 Vera Wang. Cherie is breathtaking in this stunning long red gown by Betsy & Adam, $138.

5. Reese Witherspoon, nominee, Legally Blonde; you would never know she's a mom from the way she looks in this revealing yet classy Versace. Jolynn looks sexy and sweet in heels and a purple slip dress made of synthetic nylon and metallic blend. Our version is from Daffy's for an unbelievable $18.08.

6. Sarah Jessica Parker, Best Actress for Sex and the City in Chanel's $30,000 haute couture. I found the fabulous pant at Casual Corner and bought poly taffeta, a cameo and ribbon. Add the hair camellia and you have Sarah's look for only $109.

Mixing Mythology and Merlot

Stargazing in the Hamptons has a different connotation than it does, say, at New York's Hayden Planetarium. But this Saturday evening, February 2, at 7 p.m., astrologer Don Cerow will lead a stargazing jaunt, of the celestial variety, at Channing Daughters Winery in Bridgehampton. Don will explore the myths and legends behind the more famous constellations of the winter sky, including Orion, Taurus, the Pleiades and the Big Dipper. Large telescopes will be set up and the public will be treated to wine, cookies and cocoa.

Even though spring is looming on the horizon, it's not too late to sneak a few New Year's resolutions in under the wire. Topping many people's "to do" lists these days, achieving greater health seems to have turned into a major national pastime. And once again, red wine consumption is being touted as a boon to those seeking healthier hearts and lower cholesterol.

In a cover story appearing January 21, Time magazine listed red wine – when consumed in moderation, of course – as one of the "10 Foods That Pack a Wallop" of beneficial ingredients. The reason? Polyphenols and resveratrol from grape skins increase "good" cholesterol while inhibiting hardening of the arteries.

"Since the wine industry is legally prohibited by the federal government from talking about the positive health benefits of moderate wine consumption, it is encouraging to see major media like Time informing the public," said Jim Trezise of the New York Wine & Grape Foundation. The other nine foods include tomatoes, spinach, nuts, broccoli, oats, salmon, garlic, blueberries and green tea. Alas, no grilled T-bones to enjoy with that estate merlot...

Speaking of New Year's resolutions, this just in from John Perry, vice president of market operations at Gristina/Galluccio Vineyards. John may have a long title, but he also has a quick wit and unfailing sense of humor. When asked what he predicts for 2002, he replied with typical candor.

"Simple. Everyone's talking about how good the 2001 harvest was. What they don't know is that I control atmospheric, environmental and all other possible weather conditions. Just wait 'til the 2002 vintage!"

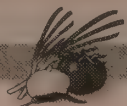

Many thanks, John, for freeing up all those tedious evenings watching The Weather Channel. Cheers.

Dan's North Fork

By Susan W. Simm

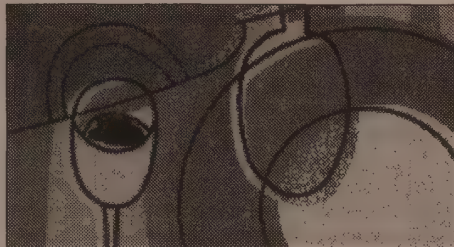

There are almost as many opinions about pairing food and wine as there are possible combinations. But a few rules carefully followed – I stress the word few here – will push toward perfection what might otherwise be an ordinary meal.

We tend to be creatures of habit and, as a result, some combinations, among foods as well as among wines, have become classics over time. If, for example, you go to the butcher to buy a leg of lamb and ask his opinion about what herb to season it with, he will most likely say rosemary. And the results would be delicious. But what about thyme or oregano? I once roasted a leg of lamb with oregano, lemon and garlic, with a nod to Greek cuisine, and it was delicious. Different, but delicious nonetheless.

The same is true of food and wine pairings. While a certain pair may produce magical results, another pair may still be a "Wow", just in a different way. But the truth is, most pairings fall somewhere in between – and that's OK. After all, a great meal, like a great wine, is more than chemistry. As Louisa Hargrave – co-founder, along with her husband Alexander, of the North Fork's first vineyard – so famously and accurately said, "I am the science, but Alex is the magic." It takes both.

Here are some basic guidelines, broad principles all, suggested by food writer Karen McNeil in an issue of Sunset magazine.

1. Relax and be playful. Food and wine pairing is not only a science. Any one of the countless variables (a different herb, more lemon juice, less sugar) can change the whole equation. Perfection (when it happens) is usually a happy accident.

2. Pair great with great, humble with humble. A leftover turkey sandwich doesn't need an expensive, complex merlot to set it off. Foods and wines of the same "status" (just like people!) seem to partner best.

3. Match intensities. Delicate with delicate, robust with robust.

4. Mirror a given flavor. The light smokiness of a hot-smoked hickory turkey, for example, calls out for a wine with a rich, smoky meatiness of its own, like a syrah. A good wine merchant can suggest a wine with flavors that echo those in your meal.

Spring is around the bend and, speaking of classic, it is the perfect season in which to serve this wonderful lamb stew. Since finding this recipe in Bon Appetit in 1994, I have made it countless times and have added variant that I found enhanced my enjoyment of it along the way. I even served it once at a semi-formal dinner party attended by a friend who was, at the time, a private chef for a very illustrious Hamptons' resident (my lips are sealed). He thought it was swell. Suggested wine accompaniments follow at the end.

THE NORTH

Spring Lamb Stew

Lighter than traditional beef versions, this is a quick, simple and elegant meal.

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 pounds lamb stew meat (while the recipe calls for pound, I have the butcher bone a leg, butterfly half, you can freeze it and grill it when the weather warms, and cut the rest into cubes. This will yield about two pounds of stew meat).
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 12 boiling onions, peeled (small white onions, not pearl onions. I once even used shallots!)
- 5 medium russet potatoes, peeled and quartered
- 4 large carrots, peeled and cut into 1-inch pieces
- 10 small bay leaves (open a fresh jar. It's worth it)
- 2 teaspoons dried thyme
- 1 can good quality beef broth (low salt is best)
- 1 can consommé (I always use Campbell's)
- 1 cup chopped fresh parsley

Melt butter in a large, heavy Dutch oven over high heat. Season lamb with salt and pepper. Add lamb to pot and sauté until brown, between 5-10 minutes. Add flour and stir two minutes. Add onions, potatoes, carrots, bay leaves and thyme and stir for two more minutes. Add broth and consommé and bring to boil (add water if necessary to cover ingredients). Reduce heat to medium-low, cover and cook about 45 minutes.

Uncover pot and simmer until gravy thickens and lamb and vegetables are tender, about 15 minutes. Season stew to taste with salt and pepper. Serve topped with fresh parsley. Serves 6.

Suggested wines: Osprey's Dominion's 1998 Flight Meritage, Pindar's 1997 Cabernet Sauvignon Reserve, Channing Daughters 2000 Fresh Red Merlot or Wölffer's 1999 Cabernet Franc. In the mood for a splurge? Try Macari's 1997 Bergen Road (a Bordeaux-style blend).

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

February is here and Valentine's Day is right around the corner. Let's do some shopping.

Before I do anything though, I am dropping Tino, my schnauzer, off for his annual dental visit at the Shinnecock Animal Hospital on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays. In the veterinary world, February is pet dental month. Because teeth are vital to your pet's health, a dental check-up is really essential to your pet's well-being. The Shinnecock Animal Hospital is now running their "Dental Special" for the entire month of February. You can save $50 by making an appointment now for the little love of your life. Tino loves it, he really does! Call them at 631-723-0500.

It's "Mystery Discount" savings time at Dansk Factory Outlet on Main Street in Southampton again. You can save an extra 15%, 20%, 30% or 50% off your entire purchase, just by asking your sales associate to reveal your incredible savings. Give it a try...

Valentine's Day is right around the corner so order early at artistry in flowers on Hampton Road in Southampton for your special valentine. This shop is filled to the rafters with special gifts and florals for every single occasion.

Watermill's Double Rainbow at the Citarella Plaza has their Valentine merchandise all ready to go out the door. Lot's of cards, wrappings, candies, Godiva chocolates. This is a fun shop that is packed to the rafters with goodies, goodies and more goodies. Check it out, only two weeks left for Valentine's Day.

LANTANA (BEST FILM AWARD IN AUSTRALIA)

There are some chic directors that I would not let direct traffic (on or off season) at the crosswalk in front of the Candy Kitchen in Bridgehampton. First of all, they wouldn't look so au courant in those baggy, tan pants. Some have had their well manicured fingers in some swanky movies that appear tres chi chi but, beneath the glossy raiment is a mere Fruit of the Loom obviousness worn thin and schmutzy. Take Harry Potter . . . please! A trillion dollar British property of talent and they give the direction to an American whose claim to fame is Home Alone, for crying out loud!

But, it's doing okay without me, as is Gosford Park. A truckload of British acting, royalty and production values and some equally persnickity whodunit, bumbling detective stuff. Our own Robert Altman, God bless him, gives it his signature muddled soundtrack and focus, as American as Iowa corn. He is a stereotypical nebbishy movie producer who is always on the phone. But don't get me wrong -

Lantana

I love Hollywood.

Then, there's the director of The Lord of the Rings. He did it with creativity that enhanced the weighty project and added to its metaphysical nature. Working with considerably thinner material, the actor turned director of In the Bedroom, wrung out some wrenching performances in a seamless emotional flow.

In much the same way, the Australian film, Lantana, is pushed way beyond its soapy elements (no suds - not a bubble). A considerable amount of grit grinds away at some forced, "small world" coincidences as four couples' lives tangle in a bramble of thorny happenstance. (A lantana is a flowering bush with those characteristics.) Snarled in a life that is "happening" to him, Anthony La Paglia is a plain clothes cop whose fabric of life is being ripped to shreds by the sharp prickles of age, physical and mental weariness, an all too loving wife (Kerry Armstrong) and growing children. This film bristles with sharp performances and Mr. La Paglia (an Australian) is as good as they get when played low, slow and even.

A mystery is just one of the gnarled entanglements of La Paglia's, with a ruinous, married woman with whom he's having sex and a paranoid psychotherapist, (Barbara Hershey) who's convinced her husband (Geoffrey Rush) is having sex with one of her gay patients. Then there's the humble young couple who live next door to the cop's sex dalliance.

The film moves with a careening, stumbling set of careless acts that strain your feelings, as surprising as bumping into a friend you haven't seen in ages . . . and with the same teetering recognition.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE: FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS PART IV: DENVER, COLORADO

From sunny Spain to the Rocky Mountains there is quite a change both art-wise and scenery-wise. Denver and its environs are as American as Spain is European. Both areas are steeped in treasured historical traditions.

Denver, home of Coors Beer and the Broncos, is a modern city with historical reminders of the past when it was the first metropolis established in the West. Don't forget, Denver was built in 1858 at the beginning of the gold rush; Pikes Peak was also discovered as people heading to California for gold decided to settle there instead.

The area saw its share of gold. Vestiges of mines can still be found near Denver. In fact towns like Idaho Springs and Silver Plume are potent places as they are also a step back in time: old miner houses dot the landscape at the foot of the mountains; local art hangs on restaurant walls. (The art is mostly representational, depicting indigenous animals and scenes, but it's well executed.)

Going beyond these towns to the top of the mountain, we encountered a sudden snowstorm; yours truly was sure we wouldn't make it down the steep roads to safety. But we did. Denver was a welcoming sight, not a snowflake anywhere.

Denver is a charming mix of 1880's Americana and modern architecture. Glass skyscrapers take over the town, the images reflected on the walls creating abstract paintings.

The historic Brown Hotel is a particularly interesting

a myriad of inlaid lighting. Curves and rectangles form an intriguing contrast.

Other buildings manifest a Chicago-style design, initiated by architect Louis Sullivan. Until 1957, height restrictions were also put on structures so that there would be a clear view of the surroundings. Completing the urban configuration are plazas, one patterned after Saint Marks in Venice. Surprisingly, there is a lack of public art, per se, but that doesn't seem to be a problem in this city, which provides a walking environment despite its reputation as a place favoring cars.

The area known as Lodo has brought people to live downtown; it probably can be compared to SoHo. The area is quite an effective urban planning project; a plan to revitalize the rail yards' neighborhood is also in progress. Artists abound in Lodo where loft culture is popular although this critic didn't get a chance to visit the Native American collection at Denver's museum.

On to Fort Collins, a smaller city and home of the state university. Old Town Square recalled Denver's art exhibits and seemed more accessible. Fort Collins contemporary museum had a particularly good show of abstract sculpture and mixed media work by young artists. Obviously, the art was more "on the edge," although statues in the square still celebrated western heroes. A mosaic mural on a downtown wall was quite striking, reminding us of an Amy Zerner tapestry.

There's a zest to Colorado that's hard to avoid: no art like New York's but energy is afoot nonetheless.

landmark recalling New York's Flatiron Building. The hotel's interior offers a surprise: tiered balconies with

silvia lehrer's cooking column

The Sports Rehab in Southampton is a busy place with physical therapy and fitness clients, who are there to ease joint or back pain, strengthen muscles and cardio, and/or exercise off excess pounds. Weight loss however can almost be self-defeating when good things to eat, both sweet and savory, arrive from many of the participants on a fairly regular basis. There is almost always a tin of cookies or a freshly made coffee or pound cake and during the recent holidays there was hardly enough room on the front entrance table to spread out the array of delicious foods.

One of the regulars at Sports Rehab, Melissa Aery, a life-long Southampton resident brought a dish that immediately said party time. The cream cheese based ring was coated with a sharp, spice-infused cocktail sauce topped with tiny shrimp. Piled high in the center of the ring were a selection of crisp crackers for spreading the delectable treat.

As I slathered Melissa's creation on a cracker or two I thought how perfect this spread would be to serve on that unofficial mid-winter holiday, Super Bowl Sunday. Add to the goodies hot crisp baguette slices spread with mayonnaise and parmesan then briefly broil until puffed and golden. For another delightful cheese spread pack a variety of cheeses with fresh herbs and wine into a crock a day or two before serving. Pull it out of the fridge at half time, garnish with refreshingly sweet grapes and crisp crackers and it's ready when you are.

MELISSA'S SHRIMP COCKTAIL SPREAD

Melissa Aery prepared this colorful and tasty spread to share with her fellow fitness friends over the winter holidays.

Serves 8-10

- 2 8-ounce packages Philadelphia cream cheese, softened
- 2 tablespoons snipped fresh chives
- Grated lemon rind
- 1 cup cocktail sauce
- 1/4 cup ketchup
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
- Dash tabasco
- 1/2 pound medium-size shrimp, cooked and coarsely chopped
- Stone wheat or other crackers for spreading
- 1. Place cream cheese in a bowl and mix in the chives and grated lemon rind. Line a ring mold with plastic wrap and spoon in the seasoned cream cheese spreading to an even layer. Chill until firm. Can be made ahead and refrigerate covered, overnight.

2. In a mixing bowl combine cocktail sauce, ketchup, lemon juice, horseradish and Tabasco and stir to mix. Refrigerate as necessary in a covered container if doing ahead.

3. To cook the shrimp: Bring 3 cups water to the boil, add a halved lemon, a celery or parsley sprig, a few peppercorns and a dash of paprika. Simmer briskly for 15 minutes. Put in the shrimp with their shells, adjust heat to medium and cook about 2 1/2-3 minutes until they turn pink. Strain and rinse under cold running water to stop the cooking. When cool enough to handle peel and devein shrimp. Chop into large coarse pieces.

To serve: Unmold the cream cheese ring onto a platter carefully discarding the plastic wrap. Spoon the seasoned cocktail sauce to coat the cream cheese and top with the shrimp. Pile crackers in the center of the ring and arrange additional crackers around the side of the mold.

CROSTINI WITH PARMESAN AND MAYONNAISE

Crostini are thin slices cut from a narrow baguette and toasted. The recipe below may seem familiar but it's an appealing "What's old is new again"

Yield: About 20-22 crostini

- 1 narrow crusty French baguette
- 3/4 cup mayonnaise
- 3/4 cup grated parmesan cheese
- Paprika
- Preheat oven to 375 degrees
- 1. Cut the baguette into 1/4-inch slices and arrange on a cookie sheet, one layer deep. Place in preheated oven and bake about 7-8 minutes or until a pale golden brown. Remove from oven and let cool.
- 2. Meanwhile, mix the mayonnaise and parmesan together in a bowl and stir until the cheese is thoroughly incorporated. Spread a layer of the cheese mixture over each crostini and return to the cookie sheet. Sprinkle each one with a bit of paprika.

3. Just before serving, adjust oven rack to 3-4 inches from source of heat and broil the crostini for 1 1/2 minutes until mixture puffs and browns. Watch this very carefully so that they do not burn. Transfer to a serving platter and serve warm or room temperature.

HERBED CHEESE MOLD WITH FRESH GRAPES

This well-seasoned cheese mold mellows as it stands and improves in flavor, so be sure to prepare it ahead. Try to use fresh herbs rather than dry, which are plentiful at most markets.

Yield: 3 cups

- 2 1/2 ounces imported parmesan cheese, grated
- 1/2 pound imported Port du Salut
- 2 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
- 3 tablespoons sweet butter, softened
- 1 tablespoon fresh marjoram
- 1 tablespoon fresh dill
- Coarse (kosher) salt to taste
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- Fresh grapes and crisp crackers for serving
- 1. Combine cheeses in a mixing bowl and stir until thoroughly combined. Add herbs, salt and wine and stir until ingredients are well distributed.
- 2. Pack into a lightly oiled 3-cup mold or crock. Cover with plastic wrap and chill for one or two days. When ready to serve unmold onto a serving dish and garnish with clusters of seedless grapes. Serve with a variety of crisp crackers.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Keeping Your Balance In A Health Crisis

When you go through a health crisis it is very easy to freeze and do nothing except follow orders. You are frightened and placed in the hands of strangers, whom you are asked to trust. There are steps, however, you can take to stay balanced through this storm. It is a time when you can form new lifestyles and habits that really nurture and nourish you while you support your own healing.

Most of us take our breath for granted; we are alive so we breathe. Breathing can activate the systems that run your body, cleanse your lungs, stimulate your circulatory system, activate your digestive system and harmonize and balance your hormonal system. Make it a priority every hour to take twenty, deep-belly breaths. Breathe slowly through your nose, bring the breath to your belly and expand it like a balloon. Hold your breath for three seconds and exhale through your mouth.

Food is another basic nourishment that we can have some control over even if you are on a restricted diet. Choose fresh, life-giving food, prepared with love. Try fresh vegetable soup and add pasta, couscous, small amounts of rice, even oatmeal to your broth; they are gentle and nourishing. Stay away from big portions, dairy and meat and drink water to keep your body hydrated and running smoothly.

When you are not feeling well and it hurts to move, you can get stuck doing nothing. Begin slowly. For awhile, the exercise of breathing deeply several times an hour will be all you can handle. Then slowly start stretching and rotating your wrists and ankles. Drop your head from side to side and let your neck stretch out. While lying in bed on your back, draw your knees to your chest, hug them and rock side to side. While lying on your back stretch your arms back and stretch your whole body. Walk around your bed, your room, your house and then move outdoors. Walk anywhere you feel safe.

Yoga is one of the best restorative/preventative programs that will offer body-mind-spirit healing. The whole philosophy and biology of a yoga lifestyle and practice are about healing and balance. It builds your inner strength and addresses every bodily function. Find a teacher that has healing qualities and embraces the whole person concept and express that you are looking for restorative yoga.

When our bodies fail us it is easy to get down on ourselves; we feel either helpless or that we are to blame. What we really need is to send ourselves all the love we can. Start looking at your childhood pictures. See the love in your young face and realize you are still that child. Every time you look in the mirror tell yourself, "I love you." Love will help you get past negative thoughts that pull you down. Never say anything bad about yourself or your body and if you hear yourself doing this, stop and say something positive.

Pay attention to the signals that your body is sending you. Take time alone and write down exactly how your body feels in as much detail as you can. This exercise will help focus you on a deeper level. Keep your pain medication to a minimum; it dulls our observation skills and clouds our minds, so take it only when you need it.

Take ten minutes, several times a day, to fill your body with love and healing energy. Go to a quiet spot, get comfortable, close your eyes, let go of your

About Face....with Annette

BABY BOOMER THERAPY

Well, I can feel it already! The heat has been on for a few weeks now and in the evening (not high either), I can feel it in my skin. That pulling sensation, that causes you to grab every product on the market to try to alleviate the dryness. You see Floridian-like creatures crawling around in TV commercials promising to get rid of your alligator skin and coupons for every lotion and potion available. Where does one start?

I think that women (and men too) over forty, can expect to be spending quite a bit on creams that may bring temporary relief to your dry skin. Other than living on some glorious tropical island with the benefit of humidity, you will have to expect to go through the "search." If you don't have any special skin conditions such as eczema or psoriasis, many of the "over the counter" products may work. If you have sensitive skin, you may need to use a product such as Cetaphil to shower and bathe. It is a soapless cleanser that has no detergents or deodorants to further dry out skin. Eucerin can also come into play as a great help for this particular skin problem along with some products that a dermatologist may prescribe. These may be creams or lotions that are applied to damp skin after a shower. Gold Bond Body Lotion is effective, but some people have a hard time getting past the medicinal smell in their products. It can clash violently with your perfume. But it does leave your body feeling relaxed and smooth.

The reasoning behind the quick application of any cream or lotion following a shower is to seal in the moisture on the skin before it has a chance to escape and allow dryness to set in.

For the best results, you should apply your favorite body lotion no longer than fifteen minutes after a shower – the sooner the better. It may feel a bit uncomfortable at first, but you will get used to it. (Of course, don't put your clothes on right away.)

Hopefully you wore enough sun block last summer (do NOT say I didn't warn you) and are still applying it on your exposed skin parts when you go outdoors. Your skin should be relatively even.

Aquatonale has an effective line for maturing skin. And you better start using it even if you are in your twenties or thirties and you haven't been taking care of your skin in the summer! Yep, even you have maturing skin!

As we mature, so does a woman's body. With the constantly shifting hormones (ok you non-baby-boomers, you can get off here) and also metabolism swings (get back on) we need something that can meet these challenges. The line, appropriately named ReVitalize addresses the results of declining estrogen levels and reduced collagen production. These can become apparent as early as age thirty-seven. This encompasses thinning of the skin, loss of elasticity, increased wrinkles and moisture loss.

Aquatonale products have infused marine biotechnology research in each of the six retail ReVitalize products. It uses the extracts of marine flora to refresh and invigorate the skin by stimulating cell renewal, strengthening the skin's metabolism, calming and soothing irritated skin, smoothing fine wrinkles and curbing future damage with protection against free radicals.

The line consists of products such as Cleansing Milk ($32/6.8oz.), which is a creamy lotion that removes, softens and prepares the skin for the remaining products and Tonic Lotion ($28/6.8oz.) which acts as a tonic to seal in the moisture that has just been dispersed by the Cleansing Milk. Aging Defense Day Cream ($46/1.75oz), Aging Defense Night Cream ($50/1.75oz.) round out your daily creams. The Aging Defense Bioactive Serum ($56/1oz.) is a favorite of mine and is used in conjunction with the day cream. It glides along your skin like liquid silk, sealing in moisture for the day. The Aging Defense Repair Mask, ($48/1.75oz) is the secret to be used now instead of those hard masks that do their share to dry out skin. This is a cream-type mask, to reveal a new softer, even-toned skin.

You can purchase Aquatonale by logging onto their site at www.aquatonale.com or by calling Takashimaya New York at 1-800-753-2038.

Pajamas, Slippers And You Just Woke Up – Ready To Work

The kids are screaming, the cell and cordless phone are ringing, the coffee has congealed into some sort of a caffeinated brown tar melting through the counter-top, and, to top it all off, the thermal fax paper now stained with the aforementioned brown tar is jamming in the rollers of an ancient fax machine. To the millions of Americans who work at home, especially those who are considering the shift, this may be something of a recurring nightmare. According to the most recent US Census, the number of Americans who work at home has just about doubled in the past twenty years to over four million workers. This is nearly as many as use public transportation to get to work. Even this is a conservative estimate though, since the census only includes those who work out of their homes full-time. There are many millions more workers who maintain a home office, but do not use it exclusively.

The first mistake most people make when creating an office space at home is to buy too much. Start simply. The basic components of a home office are office supplies (paper, pens, paperclips, staples, etc...), a phone, a reliable computer and printer, a fax machine, a copier, and a few basic items of furniture. Again, when starting out it's best to keep it simple, so stick to these basics as far as standard equipment is concerned.

You will need at least one additional phone line that is a dedicated business phone and, depending on the extent to which will you be using email and the internet, it might be a good idea to get a cable modem or DSL (Direct Satellite Link) connection for your office. Cable modems (which share bandwidth) are currently the fastest internet connection on the East End, and hook-ups currently cost about $35 to $50 a month.

The cornerstones of any office are the fax and copy machines. There are now high-quality, multifunction machines that are ideal for the home office. Instead of getting a separate fax machine, printer and copier, why not get one machine that does it all and also does quadruple duty as a scanner to boot? A high-quality flatbed, multifunction laser faxprinter copier scanner such as the Brother MFC-8500 ($650) is compatible with Macs or PC's and has just about every feature you might need. This solution provides you with a machine that is reliable, less costly than four machines and takes up less space.

Internet faxing is a valuable service that anyone with a home office should be aware of. There are a few companies offering this service on-line today, but one of the most popular is Efax.com. (www.efax.com). Internet faxing is a valid alternative for times when you are on the go and might not have been able to either retrieve or receive a fax. The site assigns you a personal 800-fax number that can receive faxes from any conventional fax machine. Once the fax is received, it does not print; rather, it is held in cyberspace until you go to the site to retrieve it. Once you go to the site to get your fax, you may print it out on any computer that you are using. Efax.com charges $9.95 a month for their service, including all received faxes.

Purpose-designed office furniture is a good investment for a few reasons. First, you will have a comfortable, well-designed space to work in where you will be more productive. Plugging in your laptop next to your bed and stretching out does not constitute comfortable or well-designed. The ideal situation is to have a separate room that serves as your office. Of course, things are not always ideal. If you are using a room that has more than one purpose or are in an area of another room, try to make your environment as professional and conducive to work as possible. Once others and, especially you, know that this is the place where you go to work, you will get much more done.

So, now that the thermal fax is in the museum where it belongs and you are plugged in, wired and ready to go, where are you going to take yourself out for coffee?

POLICE BLOTTER

An employee of the Sea Wind Motel on West Lake Drive in Montauk called police last week after a man was observed leaving the motel's office with a six-foot-long mounted fish. The fishy fellow that tried making off with the trophy decided to leave it outside the Sea Wind's front door. When police arrived they were able to track the man down, finding him in a nearby fishing boat. The motel manager opted not to press charges since he found no damage to the fish or the wall where it was hung.

Some of last week's police reports have an ironic connection to last weekend's fishing and hunting expo at Nassau Coliseum. From Sea Wind's mounted bounty to a Hayground Cove resident's report to police later last week, anglers, archers and gunmen seem to be getting restless in these late winter months. Responding officers discovered buckshot pellets in Shawn Anderson's Watermill house while investigating two shattered windows. Police suspect the shots came from some nearby hunters.

Nature called a third time on January 16 when a photographer, out for an early morning shoot at Morton National Wildlife Refuge, called police to report a break-in. The man was walking on a trail through the Noyac sanctuary when he came upon the kicked-down door of the refuge's office. Inside police found the building ransacked and sprayed with a fire extinguisher. On a counter lay the staff logbook with its latest entry reading, "1/14/02 Broke in." The facetious vandals, apparently in high spirits, drew a smiley face next to their entry.

Vandalism reports stretched all the way to Hampton Bays that same week. Southampton Town police arrested a 22-year-old Hampton Bays man at his residence just after 1 p.m. on January 15. Reports say the man "ran over a 12-foot fishing pier gate on Old Bridge Road," and just a few days later ran over two 55-gallon drums on Road H with his 10-wheeled truck.

Southampton Town men in blue arrived at the Hampton Bays United Artists Movie Theater last week after receiving a call from a patron who was attacked while having a conversation with a friend in the theater. The two men said they were sitting in their seats waiting for the movie to begin when a 47-year-old Sag Harbor resident, seated in the next row, got up and approached them. Without a word the man reached out and grabbed the victim by his neck. When police arrived, the situation had already cooled down, and officers charged the assailant with assault in the third degree. The victim was brought to Southampton Hospital for treatment of injuries suffered. Police haven't ruled out the rising price of Ju Ju Bees as a motive.

Rah, rah, sis-boom-bummer. A Sayville High School cheerleader phoned police from East Hampton High School last week to report her CD player, valued at $100, stolen some time during the basketball game. The saddened cheerleader told officers that she had left it on the bleachers while she cheered and discovered it missing when she returned.

Finally, another Montauk motel was vandalized according to police. An employee called police in regard to a customer who checked into a room with three friends. The next morning the employee discovered a sign missing from the front of the property. When the four gentlemen checked out, they were seen throwing the missing sign from their car as they drove off.

Dan's LETTERS

WHOA! A DEER, A FEMALE DEER

Dear Dan,

Since early September, I've been seeing the chiropractor three times a week. He's been treating me for two herniated discs and a pinched nerve in my back. I had been involved in a bicycling accident while training for the "Fit Hampton Triathlon" this past summer.

It had snowed over the weekend and rained the following day. The temperature had dropped, creating patches of black ice along the roadways. I was on my way to see the chiropractor when, all of a sudden, I hit a patch of black ice and spun out of control. My jeep ended up with its rear sitting on the opposite side of the road's sidewalk. Boy, was I lucky. If another car had been coming in the opposite direction, or if my jeep had hit a pole or tree, I would have been a goner.

Although I was quite shaken by my near accident, I proceeded to the chiropractor, making believe there was a policeman following me.

Just as I was passing Trout Pond, a huge deer darted out in front of my jeep. He was running so fast, and I was driving so slowly that I didn't even have to put on my brakes to avoid hitting him. Had I slammed on my brakes, I might have lost control of my jeep and skidded into the pond.

No sooner had the deer run in front of my jeep, I spotted the carcass of a dead deer in the middle of the road. I swerved to avoid hitting the deer and almost lost control of the jeep.

When I finally arrived at the chiropractor's office, I was more than ready for my adjustment. After all these near accidents, I was scared stiff.

WHERE'S MY SPLEEN?

Dear Dan,

I received a copy of the January 11 edition of Dan's Papers from a friend in Patchogue, my wife's hometown. Regarding your article All Hail Buffalo... while I enjoyed the sentiment, the real big chill I experienced was from some of your confidently expressed major errors. The present population within the city is just under 300,000, but we consider ourselves a metropolitan area just as you folks do and ours contains over a million people. As a director on the board of the Canal Society of N.Y., I'd like to be the one to let you know that since it opened in 1825, the Erie Canal has never been closed (even while being made bigger three times). Buffalo, while indeed being a snowy place, is far from being one of the coldest places. Cold air blowing over a warm Lake Erie is what gives us our reputation. Syracuse usually records more snow than Buffalo - and remember, that city and Rochester are east of us. For many years I've been aware of downstaters' mistaken thoughts regarding the western end. Ask your comrades to correctly locate Buffalo in New York State, or locate their spleen. The spleen would win, hands down.

Please give some thought to renting a houseboat in Troy this summer, enter the Erie Canal on the other side of the Hudson River and come see us in Buffalo! The trip is gorgeous!

THANKS DAN, YOU'RE THE MAN

Dear Dan,

Appreciation and Happy New Year from Little Flower Children's Services of New York!

The kindness that you have shown our children by donating toys brought much happiness to their Christmas. Many thanks to you for making their holiday special.

Little flower is one of the largest child care agencies in New York, serving over 2,000 children and families through our foster care and adoption services. We are so grateful to you for remembering the children in our care without families this holiday season.

On behalf of Monsignor John Fagan, executive vice president; Mrs. Mary Ryder, executive director and all the children served by little flower, thank you so much once again for always remembering Little Flower throughout the years.

surroundings and imagine yourself sitting inside divine light. Feel the love of God manifested in this light surrounding you and filling you. Each time you do this you will feel renewed and revitalized. Do this little ritual as often as you can. You'll begin to see yourself healthy strong and glowing with health.

Employ not begging prayer, but affirmative prayer. Doctors have reported that people who pray and are prayed for do better in all aspects of their healing. Open yourself to universal energy with prayer and ask your friends and loved ones to pray for you affirmatively.

You need to be touched even if you do not think you do or if you haven't been touched in years. The human being needs to be touched in a loving manner and our bodies reach out for touch and respond with good restful feelings that change your body chemistry. Ask a friend to massage your hands, feet neck and shoulders; it replenishes and sparks the life force.

We live in a wondrous time when body parts can be replaced and surgery can be done through tiny incisions. We can go in for replacement parts, but we need to help and support our own healing. Fill yourself with healing energy as you call forth your own power of healing energy. Remember, the seeds of healing are planted and we must keep giving them nourishment until the roots take hold. God bless.

Linda Cucurullo is yoga therapist, lecturer and author who specializes in bringing the whole person into balance. Call 516-483-4453 for information on classes and workshops.

SNUG HARBOR ESTATES.

In the village of Westhampton Beach Snug Harbor brings together the elegance and style of a time gone by. It's a short walk/bike ride to Main Street, worship, and over the bridge to the ocean. Residents have the best of all worlds, the charm of living in the village, the seclusion and privacy of an estate and proximity to the loveliest beaches on Long Island. Golf and Country Clubs are also nearby. This development is very special; only 1.2 hours from New York City is the last of its kind in the area. The property is over 26 acres and is divided into 18 tree filled lots (3 sold) ranging in size from 1-3 acres. The site is zoned and ready for building. Electric cabling, water, utilities and a quiet road are already in place. Snug Harbor is the finest property available in the village of Westhampton Beach. Architectural plans available! Exclusively listed with Ann Ciardullo, Associate Broker 631-2882-1050 Ext. 21
